for "preventing favorites from winning."
The chances are that this means foul ridling or pocketing of some sort.

In every Yankee there is something of contempt for anything born outside of America and it was probable that the boys did a bit of rough work in the saddle. As both occupied a high position in the list of winning jockeys it is difficult to see how a charge of "taking favorites" could be made and sustained Until satisfactory and complete details are had on this side it is as well to suspend judgment.

Club, open to professionals and amateurs, was brought to a close to-day with the match play rounds between the four who qualified yesterday.

George Low, Dyker Meadow, played Willie Anderson, Pittsfield, last year's open champion, while Willie Smith, open champion in 1899, had Bernard Nichols, Hollywood, as an opponent.

Low took the lead on Anderson at the start and won the first two holes, but he was even again at the fifth and they were all even again at the fifth and they were all even again at the fifth and they had been in such a date of unsettlement. The football man does not know what will happen to him by way of change of position or promotion from one day to another. Hardly so one man trained for a position before he is notified to move camp and lake a place in another part of the line or else tumble down to the second rate tanks.

Low took the lead on Anderson at the start and won the first two holes, but he was even again at the fifth and they were all even again at the turn, each having fone out in 39.
